Introduction & updates at melvinunger.com.

NBA I/19; BC A119

10. S. after Trinity (BWV 46, 101, 102)

*1 Corinthians. 12:1-11 (There is a diversity of gifts but one Spirit)

*Luke 19:41-48 (Jesus foretells destruction of Jerusalem and drives traders out of temple)

Librettist: perhaps Christoph Helm

FP: 25 August 1726 (Leipzig: St. Thomas)

This cantata belongs to Bach's third cantata cycle in Leipzig (see notes).

Instrumentation:

Flauto traverso or violino piccolo

Ob I, II

The cantata is a call to repentance before judgment.

Form: Part 1: Chorus - Recit (B) - Aria (A) - Aria (Bass). Part 2: Aria (T) - Recit (A) - Chorale. The cantata is in chiastic form. Bach often used chiastic (x-shaped/symmetrical) forms, in which center movements (where the mirror image begins) provide the crux of the matter. There antithetical elements meet or are paradoxically inverted (formal inversion reflects an aspect of reversal or turning in the text). Martin Petzoldt outlines the symmetrical structure (see Bach Kommentar 1:238):

J.S. Bach

Cantata No. 102

Herr, deine Augen sehen nach dem Glauben

Konrad Küster writes, "This cantata played an important part in the early dissemination of Bach's music." See note.

Erster Theil.

(Coro.) Introductory ritornello a b (mm. 1-10, 11-20).

(Tempo ordinario  $\text{♩} = 72$ )

Instead of opening part 2 with the New Testament text (as expected with a Meiningen libretto) Bach ends part 1 with it (see notes).

4. B Arioso (New Test.) Repentance is not humiliation, but encouragement towards the goal.

5. T Aria. Fright of the secure soul

3. A Aria. Unawareness of the harm to the soul

6. A Recit. Lost time for repentance

2. B Recit. Human perversion of will

7. Chorale. Man, repent; ask for help!

1. Chorus (Old Test.) God wants faith; man is hard.

The librettist's choice of the Old Testament passage is related to Jesus weeping over Jerusalem in the Gospel reading.

Bach reused this movement for the "Kyrie" in his Mass in G minor (see note).

Oscillating figure by alternating oboes may suggest vacillation (cf. 55/1, 105/3, 150/6).

21. A Soprano. "Herr, deine Augen...": Concertante fore-structure, soloistic, chordal; ritornello themes (mm. 21–33).

Regarding the interweaving of choir and orchestra, Helmuth Rilling notes, "Throughout the cantata, Bach develops subjects and motives that are played by instruments as well as sung by the chorus. Gone are the motives that are specific to one or the other." See Helmuth Rilling, The Oregon Bach Festival Master Class Lectures, vol. 1 (Dayton, Ohio: Roger Dean Publishing, 2000), p. 169.

Section B. "Sie haben ein härter Angesicht...": Choral fugue, instruments partly colla parte, partly independent (mm. 72–97). The fugue subject opens with hammering syllabic declamation, then employs "dissonant and strident tritone intervals" to depict "face harder than a rock." (Compare Helmuth Rilling, The Oregon Bach Festival Master Class Lectures, vol. 1 (Dayton, Ohio: Roger Dean Publishing, 2000), p. 174.)

Tritone

p Editorial continuo realization

C major      E dim.7      F minor      F minor

Alto is often the voice of faith.

Alfred Dürr describes the movement as "an aria whose gestures could hardly be surpassed for compelling effect. Entering with a longheld dissonant d2-flat, the obbligato oboe seems to call out 'Woe!' over the impenitent soul. The entire melodic line of the movement, with its false relations and extraordinary intervals, is a single highly graphic portrayal of the soul that 'cuts itself off from God's grace.'" See Alfred Dürr, "The Cantatas of J. S. Bach," translated by Richard Jones (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 2005), p. 489. The sinewy, chromatic lines of oboe and singer intertwine in dialogue throughout the movement.

The movement's unusual dissonances and syncopations serve to accentuate particular words.

This is the central (pivot) movement in the cantata's chiastic form, where antithetical elements meet or are paradoxically inverted (formal inversion reflects an aspect of reversal or turning in the text). Here the text changes to the first person singular (i.e., it turns to the individual) with a call for personal turning/repentance ("Buße").

Normally, in a Meiningen-style libretto, the New Testament dictum begins the second part (see note at no. 1).

The galant element style with quick tempo, dance-like triple meter (but with asymmetrical phrase lengths, major key, and patter diction (with misplaced accents) seems at odds with the text—ürr thinks Bach had musical rather than textual considerations in mind (see note). However, these galant elements suggest that Bach wanted to portray the positive aspect of God coaxing or enticing ("locket") the sinner to repentance with benevolence (more below).

Helmut Rilling suggests that the tutti strings represent the richness of God's grace (see Oregon Bach Festival lectures, vol. 1, p. 178).

Ritornello ends with "coquettish" ("locken") staccato figure.

Bach reused this movement for the "Quoniam" in his Mass in F major (see note).

Like its counterpart in the cantata's
symmetrical structure,
no. 5 is a trio.The flute was later replaced with a

•Exhortation to repent: Waiting is very dangerous! (102/6).

102/6. 1. Alto.

Ob I Ob II Beim War - ten ist Ge - fahr; willst du die Zeit ver -

C A-flat G F D

In waiting there-is danger; wouldst thou the time lose?

Bassetto technique (removing continuo support) is often used by Bach to depict something heavenly, unearthly, incomprehensible, or without foundation. Here the "waiting" of the continuo with a monotonous oboe figure (representing the inexorable passage of time, like the ticking of a clock) produces a timelessness (there is no indication of when a cadence will come) in which waiting is dangerous because no one knows when the Final Judgment will come. See Helmuth Rilling, The Oregon Bach Festival Master Class Lectures, vol. 1 (Dayton, Ohio: Roger Dean Publishing, 2000), p. 181, Martin Petzoldt, Bach Kommentar 1:246..

Chromatic saturation in the vocal part in the equivalent of 10 mm.

No continuo for several measures, with "ticking" clock-like figure in the oboes (that the figures on beats 1 & 3 here are editorial). The parallel 3rds suggest sweetness. Each "tick" suggests an "Augenblick."

C minor      C minor      E-flat major

"Heut" ("today") and "Augenblick" ("blink of and eye") serve as keywords, linking the chorale to the previous texts.

This movement employs the last 2 stanzas of 7 in the 1630 chorale "So wahr ich lebe, spricht dein Gott" by Johann Heermann (1585–1647).

Stanza 1 is still an admonition to repent with a warning; stanza 2 is a prayer to Jesus for help.
